Summary: From 1916 to 1978, Long Hill was the summer home of noted author and editor of The Atlantic Monthly, Ellery Sedgwick, and his family. Today, visitors delight in the beauty of Long Hills structured and naturalistic gardens as well as a network of woodland trails. A diverse collection of mature specimen trees, shrubs, and distinctive perennial plants provide color during the growing season, peaking in May and June and providing structure and beauty throughout the year. With an ever-growing calendar of public events and festivities, you'll find ample reason for frequent returns. Free admission to Trustees of Reservation members.

Additional information: A very peaceful setting with lots of separate "rooms" to enjoy the garden and grounds. Weddings and other functions do take place throughout the summer season. Starting on July 6, 2021, they will have new Public Garden Operating Hours and Admission Fees. Due to space constraints, pre-registration is encouraged, but not required. Timed reservations are encouraged, a limited number of passes are available on site.

Public Garden Operating Hours (starting Tuesday, July 6)

Thursday-Tuesday 10AM to 6PM with last admission at 5PM
